Utilities & Captive Power Plants at the Centre of India's Regulatory Transition

India's power sector is passing through one of its most significant transformation phases since the Electricity Act, 2003. What began as a reform process focused on sector unbundling, tariff rationalization and private participation has now evolved into a more complex framework driven by market liberalisation, decarbonisation mandates, digital compliance and commercial discipline. For utilities and captive power producers, regulatory affairs is no longer a support function—it is now central to business continuity, cost optimisation, investment decisions and long-term competitiveness.

Over the last two decades, India has steadily built a regulatory architecture involving the Ministry of Power, Central Electricity Authority, Central Electricity Regulatory Commission, State Electricity Regulatory Commissions, environmental authorities and grid operators. This framework has helped improve transparency in tariff determination, strengthen grid discipline, facilitate renewable integration and improve accountability across generators, transmission utilities, distribution companies and industrial power users. However, with the pace of energy transition accelerating, the regulatory ecosystem is becoming increasingly layered and dynamic.

For power utilities, regulatory responsibilities today extend far beyond periodic filings and statutory reporting. They now encompass tariff petitions, fuel cost recovery, change-in-law claims, ancillary service participation, cybersecurity obligations, emissions compliance, ash and water management, renewable purchase obligations, ESG disclosures and stakeholder engagement. For captive and industrial power producers, the regulatory burden is equally critical—particularly in relation to open access, banking, wheeling charges, cross-subsidy surcharge, grid connectivity approvals, environmental clearances and carbon-related reporting. Regulatory strategy now directly affects plant economics, operational flexibility and project bankability.

India's policy reforms over the past few years have significantly altered the compliance and commercial landscape. The push toward green open access, real-time electricity markets, market-based economic dispatch, energy storage obligations, revised environmental norms, flexible thermal operations and digital compliance monitoring has created both opportunities and uncertainties. Utilities are being expected to deliver cleaner, more reliable and more affordable power while maintaining strict adherence to evolving legal and technical frameworks. Captive users, especially in sectors such as cement, metals, chemicals and manufacturing, are increasingly using power strategy as a lever for cost reduction and sustainability goals—making regulatory clarity essential.

Another critical shift is the growing overlap between regulatory affairs, commercial risk management and corporate governance. Delayed approvals, tariff disputes, payment security concerns, contract interpretation issues and changing state-level policies can materially impact plant performance and investor confidence. Regulatory teams are now expected to proactively interpret policy, anticipate reform trajectories, manage litigation risk and support management decision-making. This makes regulatory capability a strategic differentiator for both public and private sector power players.

The next five years will be particularly defining. India's ambitions around 500 GW non-fossil capacity, grid modernisation, storage deployment, demand-side management and industrial decarbonisation will require a more agile, harmonised and technology-enabled regulatory ecosystem. Utilities will need stronger internal coordination between operations, legal, environment, finance and corporate affairs. Captive power plants will need better preparedness for evolving open access structures, emissions obligations and market-linked procurement opportunities. Future-ready regulatory leadership will therefore be essential to ensure resilience, compliance and profitable growth.

Against this backdrop, Regulatory Affairs – 2026 is designed as a focused industry platform to bring together utilities, captive power producers, regulators, policymakers, legal experts and technology providers to discuss the next phase of power sector transformation. Building on the strong foundation of the last two editions which addressed the challenges faced by regulatory departments in utility and captive power plants—this year's conference will go beyond compliance and focus on strategic regulatory transformation, commercial preparedness and future regulatory leadership.

the CONFERENCE

Two day conference + AWARDS on Regulatory Affairs is designed as a focused industry platform to bring together utilities, captive power producers, regulators, policymakers, legal experts and technology providers to discuss the next phase of power sector transformation.

Regulatory Affairs – 2026 will serve as a critical forum to:

- ✓ understand evolving policy reforms and their business implications,
- ✓ decode market and tariff developments,
- ✓ address regulatory bottlenecks in project approvals and operations,
- ✓ share utility and captive plant case studies,
- ✓ improve compliance systems and digital reporting,
- ✓ strengthen legal and commercial risk mitigation,
- ✓ prepare organisations for India's energy transition roadmap.

In an environment where regulation increasingly shapes operational viability and business outcomes, Regulatory Affairs – 2026 aims to help industry leaders move from reactive compliance to proactive regulatory excellence.

FOCUSSED COVERAGE ON

- ✓ Power Sector Policy & Regulatory Reforms
- ✓ Tariff Strategy, Cost Recovery & Commercial Sustainability
- ✓ Open Access, Power Markets & Captive Power Regulations
- ✓ Environmental, Emissions & Statutory Compliance
- ✓ Renewable Integration, Storage & Grid Compliance
- ✓ Regulatory Risk, Legal Strategy & Dispute Management
- ✓ Digitalisation of Regulatory Affairs
- ✓ Future-Ready Regulatory Leadership

Regulatory Affairs – 2026 will focus on the most critical regulatory, commercial and compliance priorities shaping India's evolving power sector, with special emphasis on utilities and captive power

Power Sector Policy & Regulatory Reforms

- ✓ Emerging policy developments under the Electricity Act and allied rules
- ✓ Evolving role of CERC, SERCs and sector institutions
- ✓ Regulatory implications of market reforms and power sector restructuring
- ✓ Harmonisation challenges across states

Tariff Strategy, Cost Recovery & Commercial Sustainability

- ✓ Tariff petitions, true-up and approval timelines
- ✓ Fuel cost pass-through and change-in-law claims
- ✓ Managing delayed payments and payment security risks
- ✓ Commercial implications of evolving tariff frameworks

Open Access, Power Markets & Captive Power Regulations

- ✓ Green open access regulations and state implementation challenges
- ✓ Banking, wheeling, cross-subsidy surcharge and transmission charges
- ✓ Group captive and third-party sale structures
- ✓ Market participation opportunities for industrial consumers

Environmental, Emissions & Statutory Compliance

- ✓ Emission norms for thermal power plants
- ✓ Ash utilisation, water management and waste handling compliance
- ✓ Environmental clearances and consent management
- ✓ Regulatory preparedness for carbon and ESG-linked obligations

Renewable Integration, Storage & Grid Compliance

- ✓ Renewable purchase obligations and compliance strategies
- ✓ Grid connectivity, scheduling, forecasting and DSM
- ✓ Energy storage regulations and ancillary service participation
- ✓ Flexible operation requirements for conventional plants

Regulatory Risk, Legal Strategy & Dispute Management

- ✓ Managing litigation, arbitration and regulatory appeals
- ✓ Contractual risk under PPAs and fuel supply agreements
- ✓ Regulatory due diligence and documentation best practices
- ✓ Recent landmark sector rulings and lessons learned

Digitalisation of Regulatory Affairs

- ✓ Digital compliance systems and regulatory dashboards
- ✓ AI and analytics for monitoring, filings and alerts
- ✓ Audit readiness and document traceability
- ✓ Cybersecurity and data reporting obligations

Future-Ready Regulatory Leadership

- ✓ Building internal regulatory capability and governance
- ✓ Cross-functional coordination between legal, finance and operations
- ✓ Board-level reporting and strategic decision support
- ✓ Preparing for long-term energy transition and market evolution

Who Should Participate?

Regulatory Affairs – 2026 is designed for senior professionals responsible for regulatory compliance, commercial strategy, statutory approvals and risk management across India's power value chain. This conference will serve as a strategic platform for stakeholders who are shaping regulatory decisions, ensuring compliance and driving commercial resilience in India's power sector.

Regulatory Compliance Awards 2025

Mission Energy Foundation is proud to have recognized and celebrated outstanding initiatives, innovative practices and leadership excellence across India's power sector over the years. Through its industry platforms, the Foundation has honored utilities and captive power plants—both large and small—that have demonstrated a strong commitment to operational excellence, sustainability and responsible growth.

Regulatory
Compliance
Awards

The awards will honor excellence in areas such as:

- ✓ Statutory and regulatory compliance management
- ✓ Environmental and emissions compliance
- ✓ Tariff and commercial governance
- ✓ Safety and risk management
- ✓ Digital compliance systems
- ✓ Sustainable operations and ESG integration
- ✓ Stakeholder engagement and transparency

In today's rapidly evolving regulatory landscape, compliance is no longer limited to meeting mandatory requirements. It has become a strategic function that directly impacts plant reliability, commercial performance, stakeholder confidence and long-term business sustainability. These awards aim to recognize organisations that have proactively strengthened their regulatory systems, embraced best practices and created a culture of accountability and continuous improvement.

The Regulatory Compliance Awards – 2026 have been instituted to acknowledge power sector organisations that have demonstrated exemplary commitment towards regulatory compliance, statutory governance, environmental stewardship, operational safety and responsible business practices.

The Regulatory Compliance Awards – 2026 seek to spotlight industry leaders who are setting new benchmarks in compliance excellence while supporting India's broader goals of power sector reform, energy transition and sustainable industrial growth.

Beyond recognition, the awards aim to inspire the wider industry to adopt progressive compliance frameworks, improve governance standards and foster innovation in regulatory management. By showcasing successful models and best-in-class practices, the awards will serve as a catalyst for continuous improvement and future-ready regulatory leadership across India's power sector.
